British Science Week 2019

British Science Week is a ten-day celebration of science, technology, engineering and maths taking place on 8th-17th March. Getting involved in British Science Week is really easy and you can take part in lots of different ways.

You can plan activities, events and download activity packs from the website. Themed around 'journeys', the activity packs provide easy-to-do, hands-on activities that parents and teachers can easily run with their students and children. From creating tunnels, time capsules and perfume to keeping a nature log and mummifying an orange, there's something for everyone.

Urgent and important stories...!

National Child Measurement Programme - NCMP is due to begin in Nottingham on the 11th March. All headteachers have been sent the pre-measurement letters and information leaflet with a request that they are emailed to all parents of children in reception and year 6 (or printed for those parents with no email address). This is really important as it gives parents information about the NCMP and the opportunity to let schools know if they do not want their child to be weighed and measured. Thank you for your support with this important public health programme.
